PREFACE.

In response to an earnest demand for a city directory, the publishers began this work, realizing that the patronage received from Asheville's business men would poorly compensate them for their labor. Much encouragement was given by all leading business men and citizens, and finally the city officials employed them to take an official census and number the houses. The latter was done not only as a great convenience, but to be ready for the free mail service to which Asheville will soon be entitled. This enterprise on the part of the city and liberality on the part of her citizens, has enabled the publishers to thus place the products of their humble efforts before the public with as much completeness and perfection as was possible in such work.

Altogether, a thorough canvass of the city was made, and while we do not claim that this book is either perfect or infallible—which would be impossible in such work—yet we do claim that it is as nearly correct and reliable as thorough canvassing and great carefulness could make it.

With a pardonable pride, the publishers call attention to their advertising pages, among which will be found cards from all the leading, enterprising and progressive business men of the city, whom we commend as honest and liberal in their dealings with their patrons as they have been earnest in advancing the best interests of the city in aiding this publication.

Some errors and changes will be found preceding this, under the head of "Errata." Some names accidentally overlooked in the arrangement of the Directory, and some changes which have taken place since our canvass was made.

Very respectfully,

THE SOUTHERN DIRECTORY COMPANY.

PLACES OF INTEREST IN AND AROUND ASHEVILLE.

Located itself in one of the most beautiful and picturesque portions of the country, with magnificent scenery on every hand, yet there are many spots in and around this growing mountain city to which we desire to call the special attention of visitors. The roads leading to these places are generally in good condition, making pleasant drives, with some of the finest views to be had from the roads themselves.

First, we will mention Richmond Hill, which is four miles northwest from the courthouse, approached by a well kept and delightful drive, crossing the French Broad river on a first-class iron bridge, just below the county and Western North Carolina Railroad bridges. These splendid grounds are the property of Hon. Richmond Pearson, at present member of the Legislature from this section, and are generously thrown open to the public. We cannot attempt a description of them, but assure our readers that a visit will be thoroughly enjoyable.

Fernihurst, the property of Col. J. K. Connally, is just two miles south of the courthouse, overlooking the Swannanoa river, and besides the beautiful grounds, commands many magnificent views of river, valley, hills and mountains. This is approached by a pleasant drive down Main street, and out Garrett avenue.

Beaumont is situated on the summit of the mountain, just east and overlooking the town, the property of Capt. Hazzard. A fine drive circles the summit, giving extensive views of the city and the surrounding country. This is unquestionably the finest view near Asheville.

Tahkeeostee Farm is something over a mile, nearly directly west from the city, and west of the French Broad river, and is a very popular drive for the pleasure seeker.

Sunset Drive extends from College street along the side and gradually assending the mountain immediately east of the city, shaded by the giant forest trees of the mountain and affording excellent views of the city and surrounding country.

The White Sulphur Springs is fifteen miles northwest of Asheville, and besides possessing the attraction of excellent white sulphur water, is located in an unusually lovely and picturesque section. There is a first-class hotel here, and is largely patronized by pleasure and health seekers during the entire year.

Five miles west from Asheville is to be found the Yellow Sulphur Springs. These springs are located in the midst of some of the most enchanting scenery, and are strongly impregnated with sulphur. Leaving Asheville, going out Patton avenue, or Haywood street, crossing the county bridge over the French Broad, and on out the Haywood road, this is one of the most pleasant drives leading from the city.

Directly east from Asheville, some two miles, across the mountain, are found mineral springs of several varieties, and besides gaining some of the best views of the city from the summit of the mountain, a far extending panorama of distant mountains, hills and valleys is laid before the eye more beautiful in natural and picturesque grandeur than the famous mountain scenery of Switzerland.

Arden Park, just ten miles south from Asheville, offers many attractions to the summer tourist. Here is found one of those first-class, hospitable and stylish hotels, for which this mountain section is so justly celebrated, and is approached by an easy and well shaded drive over the Hendersonville road.

Something over twenty miles east from Asheville, on the Western North Carolina Railroad, is the famous Round Knob Hotel, situated in a basin formed by the surrounding peaks of the Blue Ridge, and near that point in the mountains where the railroad winds its serpentine coils up the steep mountain sides in assending to the summit. Here, just in front of this hotel is a fountain which throws a strong stream of ice-cold sparkling water over a hundred feet in the air. This fountain is supplied through pipes from a natural spring near the summit of an over-hanging peak.

The Hot Springs are located on the Western North Carolina Railroad and the French Broad River, forty miles below

Asheville, and are surrounded by giant peaks and lofty mountains on either hand, the only approach or outlet being up or down the river. This popular resort is too well known to require any descriptions from us. The new hotel, just completed, has every modern equipment, and the most fastidious can find perfect satisfaction.

We only call attention to some of the most prominent places of interest, as our space is limited, and as the livery and hotel men mentioned in this work will all take pleasure in adding any information possible on this subject.

We close by briefly mentioning a few places in the city:

Asheville Library, over S. R. Kepler's, S. Main street.

Asheville Club, over the Bank of Asheville, S. Main street.

City Greenhouse, Chestnut street.

Lindsey's Art Gallery, 57 S. Main street.

The Fish Ponds, owned by J. W. C. Deake, on Charlotte street.

Asheville Cemetery, west of the city, on Cemetery street.

Fish Pond, owned by Capt. Cocke, on Depot street.

ASHEVILLE.

In introducing the Directory to the public, it is proper to say something of the subject to which it is chiefly devoted. But in doing so, we shall treat very lightly of historical events, however interesting they may be ; since, as is natural, the concern of our readers is more directly with the present than the past, and in the rapid tide of events which sweep on so resistlessly to bear the modest village of a few years ago to the altitude of city dignity, it is better to view it from that point at which its development began. For there was a period, and that a long one, during which the germs of this development lay dormant, and from its foundation until the accession of railroad facilities there was a progress so little noticeable, that Asheville vegetated in torpid quietude, rather than advanced in size, population or consequence.

Briefly, it may be said that Buncombe county, of which Asheville became the county seat, was formed in 1791 from the counties of Burke and Rutherford, and was named for Edward Buncombe, of Revolutionary memory, but distinguished more largely for hospitality and geniality of nature than for soldierly qualities, or the wisdom or brilliancy of statesmanship. And the name, like that of many of the compatriots of the day, might be forgotten had it not been kept in living memory by the national proverbial expression associated with it. Buncombe county had another title to prominence ; for before it became subject to sub-division, it was the sole county of the transmontane region, filling an area nearly equaling one-fourth of that of the whole state of North Carolina, and drawing to it the magniloquent name of the "State of Buncombe."

Asheville, the county seat, and for many years the center of its business, commercial and legal, was located the same year the county was formed, and at first named Morristown, subsequently receiving its present name, in honor of Samuel Ashe, a revolutionary patriot, and once Governor of North Carolina. It is situated near the confluence of the French Broad and Swannanoa rivers, the courthouse being one mile from the former and two miles from the latter, though the expansion of the town in all directions is rapidly bringing it to the margins of each of these streams. The site of the town is a series of broken hills between the Town Mountains on the east and the French Broad River, on the west. Relatively to the higher mountains, and as seen from them, the location is a plain ; but as related to the river, from which the hills rise as they recede from it to a height of 250 feet above its level, it presents a broken irregular contour, friendly to the picturesque and to purposes of health, but interposing some obstacles to symmetrical arrangements of public thoroughfares. But if irregular in surface, compensation is had in all its parts, in the magnificence of the prospects spread before the eye ; in the placid foreground of broad or sinuous valley, in the verdant foothills with which they are margined, and in the distant outlines of mountain ranges, surmounted by many a culminating peak, and invested in that deep or tender blue which distance throws over the scene.

The elevation of Asheville above the sea, according to measurements long accepted, is 2,250 feet, and 250 feet above the level of the river. More recent measurements, made under the authority of the general government, but never officially announced, add 130 feet to this elevation.

This elevation secures a modification of the summer heat, which is never intense, rarely rising above 84°, sometimes to 90°, in the shade ; and the summer nights are always deliciously pleasant. While, during the summer, the air is always fanned with gentle breezes, there is marked and remarkable absence of boisterous winds. When the spring is fully established, the atmospheric turmoil at once subsides, only to be renewed on the return of winter. The winters are marked by the same general moderation ; occasional severe accesses of cold, at which time the mercury falls below zero, high northwesterly winds, frequent light snows, occasional rains, but a predominance of clear, balmy and delightful weather. The annual rainfall is ascertained to be a fraction over 40 inches, taking the average of ten years. There are exceptional years in which more or less rain falls than usual, but on the whole, there is great uniformity, and the climate of Asheville is unmistakably healthy, invigorating and delightful.

Asheville, as we have before said, made little progress from its foundation, until it was reached by the W. N. C. Railroad in 1881. Its healthfulness, the beauty of its surrounding scenery, and some foreshadowing of its future prominence had brought it into notice ; and this gave a stimulus to the work of internal improvement which was to make Asheville accessible, and also do long deferred justice to long neglected Western North Carolina. In the fulfillment of this justice, more has been developed than was anticipated, for more deliberate observation of its position, and the topography of the country, proves it to be a natural and unavoidable railroad centre. The configuration of the valleys and of the mountains, demonstrates this to be strikingly true. The valley of the Swannanoa, opening westward from the Swannanoa gap of the Blue ridge, opens it for the passage of the railroad into the mountain region. The Hickorynut Gap, crossing the Ridge further South than the former, opens another line of communication, soon, it is expected, to be occupied by the Carolina Central Railroad ; and both of these lines converge upon Asheville. The broad depression that begins at Hendersonville, has induced the construction of the Spartanburg and Asheville road, which also necessarily comes to Asheville. So, the contemplated Greeneville and Asheville road, and the Atlanta and Asheville road, to both of which charters have been granted must come down the valley of the French Broad river, and must unavoidably come to Asheville. And when they reach Asheville, their further progress is governed by the configuration of the river. Below Asheville, a gorge, mar-gined with a narrow bench, the river forcing its way through the Smoky mountains, and working through them, cutting the only possible pathway to railroad construction. Westward from Asheville, the same remarkable conditions exist, the valley of Hominy Creek offering the only practicable, almost the only possible access to the western counties, and to northwestern Georgia. And, again, the only feasible route for roads to the north, looking to connections with Baltimore or other distant termini, must without other alternative of choice, have Asheville in its line of direction. All openings through the mountains converge at Asheville.

The knowledge of this fact has become apparent to sagacious men, and has had material influence upon the fortunes of the place. Already it is very widely known as a health and pleasure resort, is accessible from every point of the compass, connected by perfect railroad service and with full telegraphic facilities. From a population of 2,216 in 1880, it has advanced as is shown in our census table. The main streets have been macadamized, the sidewalks are in process of reconstruction, a splendid system of electric lighting, unequaled in the South, dispels the darkness, a water supply unsurpassed anywhere in purity of quality and exhaustless abundance in quantity secures against the ravages of fire, is made to permeate every street and supply every household, and by the elevation of its distributing source, does its work automatically. Health is promoted by this abundance of fine water, and by the use to be made of it in connection with sewerage, and also by the control obtained over the dust of the streets.

In addition to what has already been accomplished, a company is formed to light the city with gas; a street railway company will soon begin the work of placing its lines; a telephone exchange has been in useful and successful operation for a year; the best of hotel accommodations are now offered the traveling public, and their very large patronage necessitate continual enlargements and additions to their buildings. The principal hotels are the Swannanoa, Battery Park, Grand Central, Carolina House, Western Hotel and Slagle Hotel. The boarding houses are numerous, and good, but too many to mention just here.

Among the other institutions of the city, we first mention the chief educational establishments. The oldest and largest of these, is the Asheville Female College, with Rev. James Atkins, Jr., President, and J. A. Branner, Business Manager, and an able and competent corps of teachers. This college is situated in one of the most pleasant and picturesque portions of the city, with large and beautiful grounds surrounding the buildings, and shaded by a splendid growth of giant forest trees. The new college (in course of erection at the time of this writing) will be a building possessing all modern improvements and appointments, and one of which Asheville, and in fact the entire South may justly feel proud. For many years after the war this college was closed, and not until the present management was placed in charge did it fully succeed in regaining the patronage and prestige it had prior to that time. Now, it is unquestionably one of the first institutions for the education of young ladies in the South. The Asheville Military Academy, with Prof. S. F. Venable, principal, is also a valuable institution for the education of young men and boys, and enjoys a large and well deserved patronage.

Several private schools are also to be found here, and also two largely attended schools for colored children.

All denominations are supplied with churches, and among the charitable institutions is the Mission Hospital, under charge of a committee of ladies, and visited daily by physicians and surgeons of prominence. The Masonic Fraternity, the Odd Fellows, the Knights of Labor and the Sons of Temperance, each have lodges and large memberships. The Asheville Club and the Asheville Library are both prosperous and well patronized.

The press of Asheville may justly claim the influence which has prompted its growth, and drawn to it the interest now felt abroad. There are two daily papers, the Citizen, edited by Furman, Stone & Cameron, and the Advance, published by Theodore Hobgood, both morning papers, and both issuing weekly editions. The Skyland Herald, published weekly by A. H. Jones, Town Topics, weekly, by Randolph & Hunt, and the Gleaner, weekly, published by the colored people. In addition to these are the following monthlies: Farmers Journal, Country Homes, published by Tomlinson Bros., and the Land of the Sky, published by Natt. Atkinson.

Such is a brief outline of the present condition of Asheville. Upon the advancement it has made within the past five years, its future progress may be safely predicated. Regarded at first chiefly as a health and summer resort, it has confirmed these claims. It is now unequivocally recognized as an important railroad centre, a large manufacturing centre, an important distributing point of trade, and a social and political centre of far-reaching influence. With a present population of 7,000, the next decade will probably close on one of not less than 25,000.

ASHEVILLE STREET DIRECTORY.

Public Square is the center of the city, and all streets are numbered as, North, East, South or West from it.

All streets running parallel with Main are numbered from Patton avenue, or College street, or from the beginning of the street nearest to either of the above streets. All streets running parallel with Patton avenue, or College street, are numbered from Main street, as above, Main street being the dividing line for all streets running East and West, and Patton avenue and College, for all running North and South.

All numbers on the right hand side of the street going from the dividing street are odd, except on North Main, which has the odd numbers on the left. Main street being the only one that runs entirely across the city, the even numbers were all placed on one side, both East and West, for convenience.

It is, and shall be, our purpose to keep everything the people want, and at prices that will induce them to place their orders with us rather than send them abroad.
